TESTIMONIES - What are they saying out there?

We have been really delighted with our son's schooling and the calibre of the teaching he has received.....we have been so pleased as we have watched him synthesize learning in English and History with trends in culture and religion in our day. He is thinking and processing all the time and we appreciate that he has been given good tools and information with which to work. Thank you for allowing him to be his own quirky self - we would hate to see that boy pushed into a mold.....molded, yes, by the Master Potter.

With a grateful heart,
A King's Parent, March 2007

I just had to say that I am again so impressed by the King's teachers. I receive detailed emails and phone calls from the teachers discussing how we can help our son succeed. We really feel supported with the challenges that being a parent can bring. The teachers are so affirming and helpful. They are special. I just wanted to let you know.

Our son was struggling with Math last semester at a public high school. The former head of the Math department there tutored him 2 or 3 times a week. He ended up with a 45%. Now after a semester at King's he's getting 89%. He is a different boy. Being in an environment where God's light shines has made all the difference. We are astonished at the change in him. We are seeing comments from teachers that we have never seen - they think he's delightful! King's is a Godsend, a lifeline, not just academically, but spiritually as well. It's quite remarkable. At King's they give you the freedom to be who you are - that's what our son needed.

Five years ago we questioned whether it was necessary for our two children to continue with Christian Education into their high school years but as we prepare for our daughter's graduation from King's, and having witnessed our son graduate a year ago, we know we made the right decision. King's has provided our children with a wonderful environment to learn and grow in. Teachers and staff alike are loving, caring and helpful and want the children to succeed. Our kids spent many days away from school training an elite sport, but together with First Class, SmartBoard technology, and the teachers' support, it made it very easy for them to stay on top of their classes. King's has nurtured our children intellectually, spiritually, emotionally, socially, and physically and we feel so very blessed and thankful.

It was a big decision to send our son to King's for high school. Now, nearing the end of his first year, we are so glad we did! From the beginning we were impressed by the teachers and administrative staff at King's. Their accessibility and the promptness with which they responded to any enquiries amazed us. We realize that they really care about each individual student and work hard to ensure that our son is successful and happy. Now, he is able to soar in a really beautiful school with outstanding staff where the name of God is lifted up. We are so grateful to the King of King's and we can't wait for our next two children to join King's.

I'm actually loving university right now. The campus is small but there's always something to do and there are three churches nearby. You have no idea how good it feels to be over prepared for Chemistry. I really think I might be able to pull off 90s in Chemistry!
Email from King's Graduate to science teacher, 2007

Hey Mr. Vanderkooy, I'm a new student and I just wanted to say that so far King's is a great school, the students are really friendly, and the teachers are great and supportive. This school is literally perfect.
